

What's Missing? – Game Instruction

Title: What's Missing?

Category: Indoor

Subcategory: Kids

Players: 2 or more

Time Required: 10–15 Minutes

Description

What's Missing? is a memory-based observation game where players take turns identifying what object has been secretly removed from a group. It's a fantastic brain-boosting activity, perfect for sharpening focus and short-term memory — especially fun for kids.

Materials Needed

- A tray or table surface
 - 8–15 small household items (toys, stationery, etc.)
 - A towel or cloth to cover the items
 - Pen and paper (optional for scoring)

How to Play

Setup:

Place several small objects on a tray and allow all players 30–60 seconds to study them.

Objective:

Identify the object that has been removed when the tray is revealed again.

Rules:

- One player is the “remover” who takes away 1–2 items secretly.
- Cover the tray again and remove an item out of sight.
- Reveal the tray and let the guessers identify what's missing.
- Alternate roles each round.

Winning:

The player with the most correct guesses after a set number of rounds wins.

Tips & Variations

- Increase the number of objects for a harder challenge.
- For younger players, use brightly colored or themed items.
- Time the guesses to make it fast-paced.
- Play in teams and rotate roles for group fun.
- Use a theme (e.g., all kitchen items or toys) for each round.
